

Practical ways to build a culture of safety at your hospital

Upgrade your patient experience.

This Patient Safety Week, Look at Your Culture of Safety to Move the Needle

Does your organization have a lower Leapfrog Hospital Safety Grade than you want it to?

You might have a buy-in problem. Without support from the people doing the work, many top-down patient safety campaigns are doomed before they even get off the ground.

So, why doesn't your staff support safety changes?

No one went into healthcare wanting to put patients in danger. The gap comes when staff members don't understand the importance of a change, don't believe in its impact, or can't get their work done in a practical way with it.

At Patient Guide Solutions, we want to help. Check out our suite of resources to help you get better safety outcomes:

PGS Patient Resource Library: Preventing DVT at Home

Guess what. There is another player in the safety game you might have missed — your patient! With the right education, your patients become vital members of your safety team.

Preventing DVT at Home makes your patients allies in the battle against blood clots after surgery or hospitalization.
